Jackie Robinson

On April 15, 1947 was an important day, because that was the first day that Jackie Robinson as the first African American to play in the major league baseball. He used to play for a black team that was called the Kansas City Monarchs. But one day a manager came to Jackie and asked him to play for his major league baseball team of white men. When his first game came, people where from the stands and the other team even his team was calling him nasty things. After all the racism in that stadium Jackie Robinson changed the world of playing baseball.
